If you purposely hold back information about changes in your household, you will owe us the value of any extra food stamps that you get. You may also be barred from the Food Stamp Program for one year after the first time, 2 years after the second time and permanently after the third time. A judge can also fine you up to $250,000, imprison you for up to 20 years, or both. A judge can also bar you for an additional 18 months. You may also have to face further prosecution under other federal laws.

- For public and medical assistance, report all changes within 10 days. For food stamps, unless you are in the simplified reporting group, report only the following changes within 10 days (Your case manager will explain the simplified reporting requirements):
- When unearned income goes up or down by more than $25. You don't have to report changes in your TCA grant.
 - When unearned income from a private source such as, contributions or child support, goes up or down by more than $100.
 - Changes in any source of income. When there is a new source of earned income the household is required to report the change within 10 days of the receipt of the first pay.
 - Changes in earnings of more than $100 for households not subject to simplified reporting requirements.
 - All changes in the number of people in your household.
 - Your new address if you move and any changes in shelter costs because of the move.
 - When cash-on-hand, stocks, bonds, and money in a bank account or savings institution reach or exceed a total of $2000 or $3000 for an elderly household.
 - Changes in the legal obligation to pay child support.
 - Changes in the work hours of an able-bodied adult without dependents when the hours fall below 80 hours per month.
